SCHOOL REPORT.

Another year has rolled away, bringing us to the time when our schools must be reported.

We are sorry to say the school machinery has not run perfectly smooth during the past year, but perhaps as much so as the average. We have been obliged, for different reasons, to make a number of changes in teachers, which is a bad thing for the schools. Even though one teacher may be just as efficient as another, time is lost in learning the ways of the new one, as, of course, no two teachers have just the same methods.

The regular attendance of scholars has been quite good, but should be better. Why is it that parents permit their children to stay away from school? You do not intend they shall acquire habits which will make them faithless to the duties and requirements of business in after life. In one school of about twenty pupils, we notice 143 cases of tardiness in nineteen weeks, and that too, in a school where the teacher was a favorite. We consider that a disgrace to the parents and scholars in any place. There ARE cases where tardiness may be unavoidable once in a while, but so many cases must be the result of a wrong somewhere, that, for the sake of the influence upon the children in later years, should be corrected. Habits of punctuality cannot be too firmly fixed in the minds of the young. Then, too, there is a tendency on the part of some of the parents to allow their children to remain at home half a day, or even more than that, in some cases of allowing them to remain away from school altogether, if the teacher does not happen to be one who pleases them, or who insists upon her rules being obeyed, even though there may have been no punishment other than to oblige them to learn the lessons assigned them, which might easily be done in time for recitation, if ANY effort had been made on the part of the scholars, as has been proved a good many times, when the scholar, seeing no other way out of it, has learned and recited the lesson in ten or fifteen minutes. Now, whom do these parents think they are injuring? It certainly does not injure the teacher, though many times her heart aches and she feels discouraged, when having done only what was for the best interests of her scholars, she was not upheld by the parents. It is not a pleasure to any teacher to have to drive her scholars to study their lessons, but parents, what would you think of a teacher who, if the lessons were missed, let them pass unnoticed? Would you be satisfied with such a one? No, neither would a teacher be justified in doing it. Then parents, help the teachers by insisting upon your children attending school every day, unless really sick, and let them understand that if they fritter away their time in school hours, they must expect to learn their lessons before they can come home, then will unlearned lessons be the exception and not the rule.

Our Roll of Honor is very good again this year. In one of our winter schools there were only six pupils registered, and six were neither absent nor tardy; in another of sixteen, eleven were perfect in attendance. The men and women who are to form the community a few years hence, are now in our schools, and it is of great importance that they form correct habits. We are pleased that so many of the parents have visited the schools. Go often to the schoolroom and see for yourselves how the school is conducted. Let the children know, by your presence, that you are anxious for their improvement. It encourages teachers to have frequent visits from the parents, and many times little troubles in school would be avoided, if the parents could see for themselves just what their own children are doing. Don't listen to the reports which come second hand. A change has been made in Arithmetics and Readers. The old books having been in use a number of years, were some of them too much worn to use any longer and a good many new ones must be bought any way, so it was thought best to make a change. One great object in making the change was to produce uniformity and thus facilitate classification. Some arrangements should be made for preserving the books during the vacation of the schools. Each house should have a case provided for that purpose. In conclusion, let us urge your most earnest attention to the cause of common schools. Those fountains of happiness, prosperity and honor, you cannot love and cherish too well. You cannot sacrifice too much for their interest; you cannot throw around them a safeguard too strong; cannot watch over them with too constant and affectionate regard.
